Project Outline

- You should have made contact with your interviewee. Have they responded? If not, how much longer will you give them before moving on to your backup contact? If so, when is your interview scheduled for? You might like to provide evidence of you communications.

  So far, none of my candidates have responded to my email. I will give them one week in order to respond and then I will move onto the backups that I have so that I will have a good amount of time to conduct the interview and complete the report.

- What is the main topic of your interview? 1-2 sentences

  The main topic of the interview is to gain understand about the culture and environment of web development companies. Another things I plan to gain understanding about is what the software developing job requires knowledge and experience of.

- What information does a reader need to know about your field/topic to be able to understand your interview? 2-3 sentences

  For a person to understand the things discussed in the interview they must have knowledge about computer science, and programming languages. They must also be familiar with the job of a web developer and what these types of jobs consist of.

- What assumptions do you have about your field/topic? That is, what are you expecting to hear from your interviewee?

  I expect to hear that the job is very difficult and similar to software engineering. I also expect to be told that I need to be good at designing UI (user interface) and have good ideas. Furthermore, I expect to be told the importance of knowing html, java script, and more information web services.

- You will use this as a contrasting perspective with what you learn in the interview. 3-4 sentences

  I have not conducted my interview yet. I expect to have more information about this after conducting the interview soon.

- If you have already conducted your interview, what most surprised you about what they said? 1-3 sentencesAny other information you feel is pertinent.

  I have not conducted my interview yet. I expect to have more information about this after conducting the interview soon.
